THE CANTON DISTURBANCES.

FURTHER PARTICULARS OF THE OUTBREAK.

[FROM OUR CANTON CORRESPONDENT.]

April 30th.

The City has been quite peaceful to-day, with the exception of a few fights which have occurred between the military and those resisting arrest. During the whole day house-to-house searches have been made, and a large number of suspected persons have been arrested. Most of these are quiet men, and a man without a pistol scarcely dare show himself in the streets now for fear of arrest. In the afternoon two men were fatally shot by the police in Sai Kwan for resisting arrest. A company of about 40 revolutionaries are being besieged in some premises in the Old City. The gates are still closed, and foreigners are warned that they enter the City at their own risk. In some instances foreigners have been turned back from the gates.

Further particulars are to hand of the late rising. It appears that the rebels were divided into five bands. The first, and strongest, made an attack on the arsenal situated outside the North Gate. The Viceroy, who was informed of all that was going to happen, had had the guards greatly strengthened, and although the attack took place in darkness the soldiers gained a complete victory over the rebels, nearly all of whom were shot down. A second party fought with the police and military in Kwang Yuen. While under cover of this fight the third attacked the Viceroy's Yamen with dynamite bombs and grenades and succeeded in setting fire to the building. The Viceroy escaped in the manner I reported yesterday. The fourth body made trouble near the South Gate, while the fifth made an attack on the police and guards at the Kwai Tak Gate. All these attacks, however, were frustrated by the authorities, and from the intimate knowledge which the Viceroy appears to have of the movements of the rebels it is evident that there are traitors in the revolutionary camp. Extraordinary measures are being taken by Government to hunt down the rebels. As I mentioned above, a house-to-house search is being made, and no steamer, launch or junk is allowed to leave the town or to enter it without every one of the passengers being subjected to a rigorous search. No person has been allowed to pass the night in a sampan, and as a matter of fact the rebels have nowhere left to hide. There does not appear to be any alarm among the foreign residents in Shamen, although all recognise the fact that someone knows what is going to happen from one minute to another. The Viceroy has sent several telephonic messages to the various Consuls assuring them that there is no fear of an anti-foreign rising. There are no less than seven foreign gunboats anchored off Shamen to-night, two French, two British, one Portuguese, one American, and one very large German boat. All night long the searchlights from the Chinese boats are playing over the sky, the police stations are strongly guarded and the men heavily armed. The authorities are to be complimented on the promptitude and energy with which they have taken the matter in hand.

The Bishop of Hongkong was to have made his pastoral visitation to Canton to-day, but on the advice of the authorities the Bishop has postponed it.

Monday, May 1st.
FURTHER OUTBREAKS.

Bad news was received here in the early hours of this morning. A revolutionary rising has taken place in Fatsan and serious trouble has occurred. According to the report about half the town has been committed to the flames and the rioting is spreading to the villages nearby.

News has also been received that the Shin Hing Prefect has been assassinated and that there has also been a revolutionary outbreak in the Wei Chow Prefecture. These two places have for a long time been known as hotbeds of sedition. It is also stated that the Sam Shui Magistrate has been murdered by rebels. There are no full particulars of these outrages as yet to hand, for the authorities are imposing a severe censorship on all news. The trains are not running, and it is very difficult to get reliable news from the country districts.

MORE TROUBLE IN THE CITY.

During the night there were several fights in the Old City, and many were killed and others arrested. The gates are to-day still closed, and it is only with the greatest difficulty that persons can enter the City. So serious is the state of affairs that all the Government schools and colleges have been closed. Rumour states that there will be a grand outbreak to-night, and the people are living in a state of considerable terror. Many women and children are leaving the City, mostly for Hongkong.

DYNAMITE BOMBS.

Hitherto the Sai Kwan and Honam Island have been free from trouble, but last evening and early this morning many arrests have been made in both places. A large consignment of dynamite bombs has just been seized. These explosives had been dispatched from Honam to the other side of the river. A house-to-house search is now to be made in Honam. I hear this morning that all the men who were besieged in the Old City yesterday have been shot down.

WOMEN CARRY AMMUNITION.

A dramatic incident occurred last night showing that Chinese women are willing to take great risks for the revolutionary cause. Three finely-dressed young women were seen to knock at the door of a house in the Old City. The inhabitants of this house were suspects, so there were several detectives near the door. These men, thinking that the women were looking about in a furtive manner, arrested them. The three were found to be the bearers of hundreds of cartridges which were bound in bolts round their bodies and even round their legs. They are still in custody, and it is not known at present what will happen to them.

ANTI-FOREIGN SPEECHES.

I hear that some of the street orators have taken advantage of the present troubles to give anti-foreign speeches. One man delivered a violent oration on the Fatsan incident of nearly three years ago. There is always the danger that should the rebels be completely defeated in their revolutionary aims they may try their hands at fomenting an anti-foreign feeling. During the past few days a bluejacket from one of the gunboats has been on duty during the night in Shamen.

LATEST NEWS.

The European employees on the Kowloon-Canton Railway and their wives have been advised by the British Consul-General to return to Canton or Hongkong.

The news that the body of rebels marching on Fatsan were fired upon on Sunday by two modern Chinese gunboats is confirmed, as it is stated that although large numbers of the rebels were killed the main body continued their march. When they arrived near Tung Chai Bridge (close to Fatsan) they encountered the troops and a fierce engagement ensued, resulting in heavy casualties on both sides. Commandant Ma was among the killed.

On Monday reinforcements arrived from Canton and the rebels were dispersed. Fatsan still remained free from disturbance.

News reaches us of an uprising in Changsha, the capital of Hunan.

ALARM ON THE SHAMEN.

Monday was a day of excitement on the Shamen. While the ceremony of opening the new branch of the Chartered Bank was in process, several rifle reports rang out, and it was seen that the Shamen Guards had fallen back on the Shamen. Immediately the alarm was sounded, and in remarkably quick time detachments were landed from the British gunboats Robin and Moorehead. One was sent to protect the steamer Fatsan, which lies off the Chinese city, and the other was posted on the British bridge, while a maxim gun was placed on the verandah of Mr. Griffiths' residence, a position which dominated the bridge. Fortunately nothing happened, but the dispatch with which these preparations were carried out—in about three minutes—was highly commended. Consul General Jameson, who was in charge of the arrangements, was practically ubiquitous, and the greatest confidence was expressed in the Consul and in the dispositions which he made. The tension which prevailed was increased by the report that the s.s. Fatsan had been attacked, but this proved untrue, the foundation being a conflict between soldiers and rebels which took place in the vicinity during which several fatalities occurred.

Notwithstanding the excitement which prevails it is remarkable that business seems to proceed as usual. No difference is noticeable at the wharves except that at moments of alarm the shopkeepers in the vicinity close their premises.

We understand that orders have been issued by the Chinese Government that no vessels should approach Canton from the front reach. Refugees, mostly ladies of the better class, are coming down to Hongkong by every steamer.

THE WRECK OF THE ASIA.

DISAPPEARANCE OF A BRITISH SUBJECT.

The description of the wreck of the Asia, published in our issue of April 26, says the N. C. Daily News, contained a brief but significant reference to the fact that one of the crew of the ill-fated vessel is reported "missing." It was assumed at the time that the man, a water-tender whose name is R. Arundel, had been taken on board one of the junks manned by piratical fisherfolk whose presence caused so much anxiety to the passengers and crew of the Asia. From information which has reached us recently, there is reason to believe that most energetic efforts are being made to discover his whereabouts, and to rescue him from his doubtless perilous situation. Up to Thursday morning the torpedo sent from Shanghai to the scope of the wreck had not succeeded in finding the missing man. British gunboats from Hongkong are on the scene, but there is no information to the effect that any armed force has been landed to continue the search ashore. Pressure is being brought to bear upon the Chinese authorities of Fukien and Hangchow to find Arundel.

THE LOST CARGO.

The Asia herself is a total wreck. According to information received here from Wenchow, the ship has a list to port of about thirty degrees, and is submerged up to the No. 4 hatch. It seems that the fishermen after removing all the cargo and fittings that they could lay hands on, set fire to the ship and escaped round Heabou Island with their booty. The only portion of the cargo not submerged consists of silk, valued at about £10,000, which was stowed on the No. 2 orlop deck. Only by prompt action on the part of the native authorities can any part of this silk be recovered. The salvage of the rest will be impossible, without the employment of divers, and from the description given by one of the passengers of the vessel, it seems probable that, in the event of heavy weather, the ship might slip back into deep water, and thus render the work of salvage more difficult than it is at present.

The C. N. S. Evening, from Swatow reports:—Str. Asia stripped of everything at Heabou Chinese gunboat in attendance.

HAMBURG LETTER.

[WRITTEN SPECIALLY FOR THE "HONGKONG DAILY PRESS."]

April 8th.

TAXATION FOR PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS.

The rapid development of the trade of this city and the growth of its population have naturally led to increased demands on the exchequer of the State; the tunnel under the Elbe, which is nearing its completion, the extension of the harbour with its new docks and quays, the deepening and correction of the course of the river, the demolition of parts of the old town in order to make room for wider thoroughfares and public parks, the underground railway now in course of construction, the suburban lines, of which some are already in operation, &c., &c., have raised the expenditure to such a degree that the income-tax and the few other taxes existing hitherto no longer suffice, particularly as the former has gradually advanced from five annas some years ago to seven and a half for the present one, beyond which it is not deemed advisable to go, considering that at that rate incomes of M. 50,000 and above are paying 10 per cent. and over. It is now proposed to increase the legacy duty, the quay and tonnage dues, the stamp duty on deeds of partnership, articles of association of limited companies, and to levy a tax on public amusements, by which means it is hoped seven million Marks may be raised annually. Whether this will meet with the approval of the Bürgerschaft remains to be seen, although it is the result of the deliberations of a joint committee of members of the Senate and of that body.

THE POPULATION OF HAMBURG.

As already stated on a former occasion, the population of the republic of Hamburg has risen from 874,873 in 1905 to 1,015,795 in 1910, the increase of 140,917 being accounted for by an excess of births over deaths of 48,510 and by 92,677 new arrivals. The number of new residents last year amounted to 147,182, of which 17,788 were of other than German nationality, compared with 141,333, of which 17,172 were aliens, in the previous year. Exclusive of sailors and other seafaring men 480,872 persons passed through Hamburg in 1910, which is rather more than in the preceding years; of these most were Germans, viz., 405,350 and only 7,903 from the United Kingdom.

Emigration from Hamburg had sunk to a very low figure in 1908 in consequence of the depression in trade prevailing in the United States, viz., to 48,593; in the following year it rose to 113,535, and in 1910 to 118,131 of the latter only 7,496 were Germans; the remainder hailing from Austria, Russia, Poland, &c. The number of cabin passengers has increased in a like satisfactory manner, 41,278 persons having left this port last year compared with 35,112 in the previous twelve months; 26,455 were foreigners on their way home, 2,643 natives of this country were bound as settlers for German East Africa and six for the German colony in Eastern Asia, the others being travellers and not emigrants. 789 steamers, of which 526 were classed as emigrant boats, were employed in conveying the ordinary passengers and emigrants to their various destinations. Nearly 100,000 of them whilst passing through this city found accommodation in the buildings erected for the purpose by the Hamburg-America Line and in the boarding-houses under control of the Government. The sanitary regulations in both are strictly enforced with the view to prevent as far as possible the introduction of cholera and other diseases; although 6,032 persons were not allowed to proceed on their journey as likely to be refused admission abroad, 2,237 more had to be brought back by the companies as "undesirables."

The passenger traffic by German boats from the ports of southern Europe during the second half of the year has again been in excess of that of the previous six months; the greater number of the passengers being farm labourers crossing the ocean for harvest work in Central and South America, whence they return home at the end of the season.

Particular attention continues to be paid by the authorities to whatever may conduce to the safety of the passengers; all steamers leaving the port, for instance, have to satisfy the inspectors appointed by the State by the entries in their log books that the crews have on the previous voyage been drilled in the lowering of boats; although 6,032 persons were not allowed to proceed on their journey as likely to be refused admission abroad, 2,237 more had to be brought back by the companies as "undesirables."

THE WINE TRADE.

The New Yorker Handelszeitung states that the failure of the vineyards of the past year in Europe have led to an extensive demand from the trade in Germany, France and Switzerland for wines from California, where the season has been more favourable. Over 3,000 hogsheads have been shipped to those countries during the last quarter of 1910 by three of the chief wine-growing companies in the States, whilst 1,500 more have been despatched since then.

THE COTTON TRADE.

The Federation of the Master Cotton Spinners have published its semi-annual statement of the stocks of cotton in the hands of spinners, according to which the supply on March last was over 100,000 bales less than at the same time last year, viz., 4,650,740 bales against 4,155,688 bales. The figures are: Great Britain, 399,021 bales against 415,182, or 8.20 per 1,000 spindles against 8.50 in 1910 and 9.72 in 1909; Germany, 30,62 per 1,000 spindles against 34.51 and 40.86; United States, 1,525,000 bales against 1,674,000, or 53.51, against 59.79 and 65.78. As returns have been made by mills running 122,226,091 spindles out of a total of 135,596,724 belonging to the Federation, these figures may be assumed to be pretty correct, making the prospective supplies of raw material for the remainder of the season look by no means overwhelming, in spite of the curtailment of production by the mills on the continent of Europe and in the United States. Prices of American cotton have consequently been hardening again of late, whereas offers from India and China are at somewhat lower rates; but then it should be remembered that prices in India had risen out of proportion to those of American descriptions.

EXPORT.

Export trade generally, however, is no longer as brisk here as it was a month or two ago. Shipments of all kinds of goods continue heavy, but fresh orders are coming in slowly, which may perhaps to some extent be accounted for by the fact that in many industries manufacturers are so well engaged that they refuse to sell for delivery before next year, or even the year after.

THE EMPRESS-DOWAGER OF CHINA.

AUDIENCE TO THE LADIES OF THE LEGATIONS.

The Peking correspondent of the N. C. Daily News gives the following interesting account of the audience given by the Empress-Dowager to the ladies of the Legations and others in Peking:—

For some weeks, owing partly to the knowledge that a certain amount of intrigue, if not of party strife, was going on inside the Forbidden City, interest in the forthcoming reception by the Empress-Dowager of the Legation ladies has been steadily increasing. In order to decide upon the representatives of all the various Legations it was necessary to call a meeting of the Diplomatic Corps, at which it was decided that the wives, sisters or daughters of the Foreign Ministers or those of the First Secretaries should attend, one from each Legation, and that five lady interpreters should complete the party. Owing to indisposition Mrs. Ijima, who had just returned from Japan, was unable to attend, and as Mrs. Honda, wife of the First Secretary, was in Japan, no one represented the Japanese Legation. The other Legations were represented as follows, precedence being according to length of residence in Peking:

British Legation, Lady Jordan (Doyenne).
Russian Legation, Madame Korostova.
Netherlands Legation, Madame Belsaert van Blokland.
United States Legation, Mrs. Calhoun.
Mexican Legation, Madame Herrero del Huerta.
Austrian Legation, Madame von Storch.
Danish Legation, Countess Albrecht.
French Legation, Madame Ploet.
German Legation, Madame Einsiedel.
Italian Legation, Madame Caltabellotta.
Belgian Legation, Madame de la Basse.
Mademoiselle Etienne.

There was naturally much competition for the posts of lady interpreters, and finally the selection was made as follows:— Madame Bauer, wife of the Austrian Secretary-Interpreter.
Mrs. Gattrell, wife of Dr. Gattrell.
Miss Pirry, daughter of T. Pirry, Esq., Postal Secretary.

Swiss, daughter of Bishop Scott.
Corbett, Missionary.

The party started from H. M. Legation at 10.30 a.m. Lady Jordan leading and all riding in green chairs. A mounted escort proceeded the representative of each Legation, the guards from the Belgian and Italian Legations looking particularly smart. At the Santo Men the party halted and the visitors left their chairs and entered small, open chairs each carried by two men. Passing over the famous marble bridge, the party was led to the new palace situated in the Coal Hill enclosure, which is not part of the old Forbidden City. This new portion of the Winter Palace was nearly completed at the time of the death of the late Empress-Dowager, who intended it as a retreat, a quiet place where she might pass the declining days of her life, on the borders of the beautiful lake. Close to the North Lake the party halted finally and were ushered into a reception room, where outer wraps necessary in the keen open air were laid aside.

Dr. W. W. Yen, of the Waiwups, who had directed the party after its entrance to the forbidden precincts, intimated that the Audience Chamber was close at hand, and that the Empress-Dowager not having prepared an address none would be expected from the visitors. That was rather a disappointment, for Lady Jordan had one prepared and everyone was anxious to hear what the Empress-Dowager would say.

In one of the reception rooms the visitors were joined by Mrs. Hu, wife of H. E. H. in Wei-to (Senior Vice-President of the Waiwups), and Mrs. Yen, wife of Dr. Yen and sister of H. E. Su Pao-chi, the able Governor of Shantung. Proceeding on towards the heart of the Palace the visitors were met in one of the halls by a group of magnificently attired Princesses, who desired in a semi-circle and as the foreign ladies approached, formed two lines and led the way to the Throne. The Princesses were Princess Tsai Tso (wife of the Prince who recently conducted the Military Mission to Europe, America and Japan), Princess Tsai Hsuan (wife of the Prince who undertook a similar mission on behalf of the Navy), Duchess Tsai Tse (wife of Duke Tsai Tse, President of the Board of Finance, and sister of the Empress Dowager), Princess Tsai Chien (wife of Prince Tsai, the oldest son, who has recently been appointed representative of the Emperor at the forthcoming Coronation of King George), and two daughters of Prince Ching, who are jointly designated Princess Four and Princess Eight.

The order of precedence taken by the Princesses was a matter of live interest to the visitors, specially to those who had attended similar functions in the time of the former Dowager, as it was noted with interest that neither the Princess Imperial (adopted daughter of the late Empress-Dowager) nor Princess Chuan (wife of His Imperial Highness the Regent) was present, for in former days these two Princesses were invariably the Chief Ladies-in-Waiting when foreign ladies were being received. Princess Tsai Tso (on the right) and Princess Tsai Hsuan (on the left), in consideration of their husband's fraternal relations to the Regent, were, therefore, given the premier positions.

As the visitors entered the Throne Room the Princesses took their stations on the right and the left. The foreign ladies were then escorted into the Throne Room by Mesdames Hu and Yen. The Empress-Dowager was seated upon her Throne, which was at the far right of a dais raised about six feet from the main floor of the Chamber. On Her Majesty's left, and a little lower down, sat the Emperor; while on the right side of the Dowager stood a little girl, the daughter of Duke Tsai Tse. The Audience Chamber was draped with yellow silk, which on the dais was of exquisite texture. Strips of light cloth were laid down for the visitors to walk upon, leading from the steps on the left towards the Dowager, thence in front of the Emperor and across to the steps on the opposite side.

Led by Lady Jordan the foreign ladies advanced into the Chamber and curtsied. Three steps farther and another curtsy was given, and then the third three steps farther on again. The Empress-Dowager sat smiling on a Throne of beautifully embossed blackwood, while on a table in front of Her Majesty lay a richly jewelled sceptre, which was then lifted carefully and carried away by a group of attendant eunuchs. The Dowager then arose and shook hands with the foreign ladies in turn as they came before the Throne. Her Majesty was richly dressed, but not clothed in official robes, and she appeared to be in excellent health and spirits. Passing on towards the Emperor the visitors were delighted to see that His Majesty was equally as much interested in the event as were they themselves. His Majesty is not a robust child and he is rather small for his age. But he appeared to be in perfectly good health, and a remarkable resemblance to the late Emperor, both in expression and features, was noticed. The future ruler of four hundred millions gazed with astonishment upon the strange people he was seeing for the first time. Still he was a wonderful example of youthful dignity as he bowed gravely as each lady came before him. His little feet encased in long Mandarin boots, scarcely reached beyond the edge of the small Throne, but even in that position His Majesty appeared perfectly at ease. On the top of his hat was seen the famous Emperor's pearl, a jewel of wondrous size and lustre. The Chinese are superstitious about this pearl. It is the common belief that when that pearl is lost the dynasty will end and not before. The gem serves admirably instead of the orthodox button, and as His Majesty bowed his head it caught and held the attention of the beholders.

As the visitors retired down the steps, the Dowager resumed her seat upon the Throne, and after leaving the Chamber, the foreign ladies saw Her Majesty no more. Luncheon, consisting of Chinese dishes of the most delicate varieties, served in semi-foreign style, was then served in an adjoining room. All the Princesses already mentioned sat at luncheon with the visitors, and it was expected that Her Majesty would join the party after luncheon, as the late Majesty had always done. A eunuch, however, came with a message saying that the visitors might expect the Dowager's apartments if they desired so to do. It was a privilege never given before, and the party, escorted by a staff of eunuchs, wandered at will through the gorgeous palace, which was seen to be surprisingly foreign in style. High windows looking out above the Throne Room disclosed the fact that there was another story above. The apartments were thought to be on a much grander and finer scale than those of the late Dowager, especially Her Majesty's sitting room, in which there is a small Throne intended for private audiences. The walls are of thick plate glass, while the cushions and drapings are all of the same rich yellow seen in the Audience Chamber. It is there evidently, that His Majesty visits the Empress-Dowager to make his daily obeisance, and it is there that Her Majesty spends many hours of the day. Passing on to more private apartments the visitors were charmed by the splendour and luxury of the magnificent suite of rooms, in all of which art were seen in delightful profusion. And so the time passed from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. when it was time to return to the press quarters of the Legation area.

The general impression of the visitors was that the Empress-Dowager wished to show every mark of favour, but that for some unknown reason the day's programme had been purposely restricted to, as far as Her Majesty's presence was concerned, to a short formal reception. The foreign ladies were also interested in nothing that the eunuch brought a message from Her Majesty concerning the visit to the private apartments, that it was to Princess Tsai Chien that the message was delivered, not to either of the wives of the Legation brothers. Many of the splendid works of art within this portion of the Winter Palace formerly belonged to the late Dowager, but the collection seen on Monday was much more numerous and costly. The reason for this may, possibly, be found in the old report that the former Empress-Dowager used to have her most cherished possessions laid aside on the days of audience to foreign ladies; lest the suspected capriciousness of foreigners should be aroused. Certain it is, however, that whereas formerly many vacant spaces were allotted to ornaments there were none on this occasion. The real reason of this, of course, may be the fact that during the days following the siege profane hands were turned towards the acquisition of valuable trophies; and that in the years that have passed since then the losses have been replaced.

A tremendous amount of romance attaches to the Forbidden City and its conservative inmates and it is indeed surprising how little is really known, by people who live within hail of the yellow walls, about the lives, the hopes, the fears and the ambitions of those inside. It is only on occasions such as this audience that any real insight can be obtained, and at such times the thought intrudes that only what is desired to be known can be seen or heard. It will be many years before any way may be established between the Rulers of China and the outside world, but there are signs of improvement on every hand. The need for walls of brick and mud has passed, but old custom dies hard in China. Within the Palace the fear of revolutionaries is said to be as great as ever, and until the voice of the people is able to decrease the form of government there will be no relaxation from the exclusiveness of the Royal Family and its attendants. Meanwhile, while a parliament is growing in strength, and there is no telling what the next few years will bring forth.

JAPANESE CREW RESCUED BY INDO-CHINA STEAMER.

PLUCKY ATTEMPT TO SAVE A SCHOONER.

Captain Hay, of the Indo-China S.S. Hop Sang, which arrived here on Sunday morning, says the Kobe Herald of the 19th ult., reports that on the morning of the 14th at 5.30, 138 miles outside Moji, he sighted two schooner Myoken Maru flying signals of distress. A moderate gale from the north-east was blowing at the time, and a very high sea was running. On approaching he found the vessel in a very damaged state, and in danger of foundering, so he offered to send his life-boat to take off the crew, but they did not wish to abandon their vessel and requested him to take them in tow. After great difficulty towlines were got on board the schooner and towing was commenced. After towing the vessel for 10 miles or so, which occupied about two hours, Captain Hay observed the schooner's crew making frantic appeals for help. A boat was immediately lowered and proceeded to them to ascertain what was the matter. On approaching it was found that the heavy seas which were running had been too much for the schooner, and she was beginning to open out all over; in fact the starboard bilge plank was washing about every time she rose to the sea. The crew accordingly wished to be taken off and put on board the British steamer, as they considered any further attempts to save their vessel would be futile, as she was rapidly settling down. The Hop Sang was stopped and a life-boat in charge of the 2nd officer (Mr. Spencer) was sent to their assistance. Considerable difficulty was experienced in getting the wrecked schooner alongside and to the necessity of keeping her stem on to the sea, but by clever handling the 2nd officer succeeded at last in getting alongside, and transferring all the crew (five men and one woman) to his boat, where afterwards returned to the Hop Sang without mishap.

The shipwrecked crew, who were very grateful to Captain Hay for standing by and rescuing them, as they feared they would go down with their vessel, were safely handed over to the Police Authorities in Moji. They stated that as less than four steamers and one transfer passed and spoke them, but would render them no assistance. The Myoken Maru was sinking rapidly when abandoned.

BUCKINGHAM PALACE.
ROMANTIC ASPECTS OF ITS EARLY DAYS.
Buckingham Palace, the London residence of the Sovereign, says a writer in the Observer, can lay but little claim to the stately traditions that surround most Royal abodes. It has only borne its palatial honours since the early twenties of the last century, what time George IV. resolved to transform Buckingham House into a palace, and, under the somewhat fallacious pretext of repairs, contrived to spend about £200,000 of the public money upon the transformation. The First Gentleman in Europe as splendidly prodigal of bricks and mortar as he was of everything else, entirely rebuilt "Queen's House," as Buckingham House was called after it was settled on Queen Charlotte, and restored to it its former name, but with the royal addition.
The ground in which Buckingham Palace stands was once occupied by mulberry gardens originally laid out in furtherance of James I.'s scheme to encourage the silk industry in England. The gardens must eventually have attained to the same eminence as certain fashionable restaurants of the present day. Hor-seyden ate tarts with Madam Ann Keve, and Evelyn mentions a party given by Lady Gerard and adds: "It is now the only place about town for persons of her quality." George Lord Goring was keeper of the gardens for some time, and lived at Goring House, which stood on the site where the Palace now stands. Goring House was destroyed by fire, but was subsequently rebuilt, and later on sold to the Earl Arlington, the same who originally introduced tea into England. It is presumably there that the fragrant Bohemian was first enjoyed by the smart set of the day.
In the last years of the 17th century the house came into the hands of John Sheffield, Earl of Mandeville and Marquis of Normandy, who was afterwards created Duke of Buckingham.
The Duke rebuilt it, and gave it the name which it bears to-day. The third wife and eventual widow of the Duke tried to dispose of the house for £60,000 to the Prince and Princess of Wales, who refused to pay the price. It was finally purchased by George III. and Queen Charlotte for one-third of the sum originally asked, and thus Buckingham House attained for the first time to the dignity of a Royal residence. But it did not receive the designation of palace until some half-century later, when the lavish son of the thrifty Royal couple, who was decidedly what Carlyle called "a very expensive Herr," determined to make it worthy of the name.

ROYAL DISLIKE.
But not till the youthful Queen Victoria came to the Throne did Buckingham Palace justly be called a palace. George IV. did not live to see it completed. William IV. cordially disliked it, and the Duke of Kent was not the man to impose any constraint either on his feelings towards the building or his language regarding it. He absolutely refused to live there, and took up his abode at St. James's Palace. But his successor did not share his aversion for the one or his preference for the other, and scarcely a month after her accession she quitted the cramped surroundings of Kensington Palace for the larger and more commodious if less beautiful residence in the Mall.
For twenty brilliant years Buckingham Palace was the scene of balls, parties and banquets more splendid one than the other, the very antithesis of the mediocre hospitalities dispensed by its former Royal occupants, George III. and Queen Charlotte, which contemporaries describe as "dull, dowdy and decent." Of the three successive early Victorian rulers, the one who most completely mastered the last. The famous Plantagenet hall at which the Queen and Prince Consort appeared as Philippa and Edward III.; the Powder hall, when her youthful Majesty wore a dress which had belonged to her grandmother, Queen Charlotte, and the Stuart ball, were all functions of unsurpassed splendour. It was one of these to which the author of the "Igloo" lay-ette, and in his immortal lay, in which the late Baroness Burdett Goutts and Prince Esterhazy, "all jewels from his jaisie to his diamond boots," came in for special notice.
Among other improvements, a magnificent ballroom was added in the early forties to the Royal residence, which, although still outwardly unimpaired, was inwardly worthy of the name.
After the death of the Prince Consort the shadow of mourning hung like a pall over Buckingham Palace. It was only in 1868 that the widowed Queen was at last induced to mitigate a little the severity of her seclusion and to hold a Drawing Room, at which the presentations were limited to seventy and the general attendance to three hundred.
How impossible such a limitation would be in the twentieth century, the thousands of applications that now annually pour into the Lord Chamberlain's office sufficiently show. It was in 1868 that the Drawing Rooms, which had been held at St. James's Palace, were first transferred to Buckingham Palace. Until the close of Queen Victoria's reign the Drawing Rooms continued to be held in the Throne Room, but after his accession King Edward promptly converted the dreary day functions into evening Court, transferring them to the ball-room.

SCENE OF FESTIVITIES.
It is with this splendid apartment that the present generation is most familiar, as State balls, concerts and evening Courts all take place there. The room used to be panelled in crimson brocade and decorated in pale shades, with much gilding, but clusters of electric lamps replaced the soft radiance of the wax candles of Victorian days. Some three years ago, however, the ball-room was entirely redecorated.
The crimson brocade disappeared, and dazzling white walls stretched their expanse from end to end of the room, broken only by the subdued tones of a single tapestry panel let in on either side. The wide gallery leading up to the ball-room contains some fine pictures, and in gazing at these belated guests who on Court nights have not been able to get into the ballroom find some solace while waiting their turn to pass the presence.
The State dining-room, where the Derby Day dinner was served in the last reign, contains some magnificent portraits. The long dining table is of mahogany, and each broad leaf is made of a single piece of wood. The State apartments are a veritable treasure house, and some of the furniture and appointments are without price. So valuable is the china that the great Sevres vases which decorate the rooms and saloons, being daily fastened to the cabinets they adorn. Dramatic improvements were made in many departments by King Edward before he took up his residence in Buckingham Palace in the second year of his reign. In Queen Victoria's day the domestic offices left much to be desired. No lifts were provided from the Royal kitchens to the other floors, and all dishes had to be carried through endless corridors, greatly to their detriment, but all was put into perfect work order by his late Majesty before he entered into occupation.
The private apartments are on the first floor and are connected by a corridor with the State apartments. They overlook the garden and are directly below the room allotted to members of the household with which they are in telephone communication. The Queen's suite is a large one, and includes sitting room, a writing room, library, boudoir, dressing room and sleeping apartment. To the right of the huge pillared bay window above the entrance to the garden is the room round which memories now cling, as it was there that King Edward passed away at a quarter to twelve on the night of May 6, 1910.

POPULATION OF THE EMPIRE. GREAT INCREASE IN BRITISH CANADA.

There has been issued as a Yellow Book the statistical abstract for the British Empire.
According to latest returns, the area of the British Empire at the end of 1909 was 11,321,000 square miles, and the estimated population of the United Kingdom in the middle of 1910 was 45,470,000.
Canada possesses the largest area, with 3,729,665 square miles, against Australia's 2,974,581 and India's 1,773,000 (including native States), while the smallest area is that of Gibraltar, namely, 17.8 square miles.
In respect of several parts of the empire, including India, statistics as to estimated population were not available at the time the tables contained in the book were compiled, and it is not possible, therefore, to give the total population. At the census of 1901 the population of British India and the native States was 294,317,032, an increase of 2,047,000 on the figures of 1891.
The population of the Commonwealth of Australia increased from 3,773,801 in 1901 to 5,374,138 at the end of 1909, and that of New Zealand from 772,719 to 955,265. The most striking increase, however, was in the case of Canada, where the population increased from 5,371,315 to 7,105,000 on March 31, 1910.
Southern Nigeria increased in population from 4,444,393 to 5,500,000 at the end of 1909.

AMERICAN TELEGRAPH AND TELEPHONE AMENITIES.

The following announcements, which have been issued by the competing telephone and telegraph companies operating in the United States, throw an interesting light upon the methods adopted by the respective undertakings in emphasizing their claims to popular patronage. It should be noted that as from the 1st instant the Western Union Telegraph Company has put in operation a "day-letter" system, the tariff for which is higher than for the night service. The following is the Company's statement relating to this matter—
"The day letter, like the night letter, is a 50-word telegram to be written in plain English; code words and code language not accepted. It is to be transmitted as the facilities of the company will permit during business hours of the day, full rate telegrams having priority of transmission. As the wires are in much demand during the midday hours, it is advisable that day letters be sent as early in the day as possible. Day letters will be accepted at any office, or they may be sent in by telephone. The day letter and the night letter give to the United States the cheapest telegraph service in the world." It is presumably in reply to the foregoing statement that the following announcement has been issued by Mr. C. Adams, Vice-President of the Postal Telegraph Cable Company—"We offer the public such fair service that there is no occasion for a deferred service. We are not a deferred company. We are express forwarders. We aim to put our business through within a few minutes from the time it is handed to us. We do not believe that the public has any occasion for a deferred day service, because the present day service and night lettergram seem to be amply sufficient. We do not think there is any demand for an intermediate service, which would be no different from the night lettergram in its practical workings."

THE FUTURE OF RUBBER.

Mr. E. H. Sharpe presided last month at Winchester House over the first ordinary general meeting of the Batafina Rubber States (Limited), and said that when the prospectus of the company was issued, out of a total area of 2,731 acres 635 acres only were planted in rubber. The remainder, however, had been cleared and planted. Thus at the present time they had about 1,300 acres planted in rubber, or nearly double the area stated to be so planted in the prospectus. It became necessary to consider by what means funds for continuing the development should be obtained.
The directors had come to the conclusion to recommend that the capital of the company should be increased to £60,000. The rubber industry was to-day in its infancy, and must increase rapidly year by year. He was told that last year America alone manufactured 250,000 motor-cars, and it was estimated that the number manufactured in the present year would be 300,000. These all required tyres, and of course the old cars also needed renewals. Should the consumption of rubber double itself in five to seven years he did not know where the 150,000 tons required would come from, if they were to go down to a price of 2s. as was predicted in some quarters, for then they would get nothing from Brazil, and would have to rely on plantation rubber. There was a net profit of £1,942 on tapirons. In the prospectus it was estimated that there would be a net profit of £2,005 on tapirons; but that amount had practically already been reached, while it was estimated that there would be another £1,000 profit under that head during 1911.
The report was adopted.

SANATOGEN

RECEIVED A SECOND
LIFE

A Second Life

"If I only had another chance!" How often does a man utter these despairing words when he feels his health undermined, his strength ebbing, his vital forces depressed—often as the result of his own errors or follies —and he realises the infinite possibilities which might lie in his grasp could he indeed receive, in Shakespeare's phrase, "A Second Life."

Happily, this other chance, this second life, is to be had for the asking by means of that

Tonic Food for the Brain and Nerves which has been aptly described by a famous physician as "the last word science has spoken" on the subject of such remedial agents, and to which, by virtue of its health-giving properties, the name of Sanatogen—meaning "Health Producer"—has been given.

So potent is its force that it will not only restore the health and vitality which have been lost, but, if persevered in, will, in addition, impart the highest measure of nervous and physical vigour of which the individual is capable; for there is a maximum capacity of health for everyone, although he may not hitherto have had the fact impressed upon him.

Doctors endorse this and daily prescribe Sanatogen, in increasing quantities.

The constituents which give Sanatogen its power are known to every physician. What they are is described below in the plainest terms in the telling analysis of Sir Charles A.
Cameron, the Chief Medical Officer of Health and Public Analyst for Dublin.

Medical Opinion A Telling Analysis Typical Letters

DR. C. W. SALEESBY, the well-known medical author:
"13, Grenville Place, London, N.W." "Sanatogen is a specially adapted food that has solved the problem of giving phosphorus in such a way that the nervous system can take hold of it. I would specially refer to its value in the feeding of invalids, whether during actual illness or during convalescence, and for nursing mothers."

SIR CHARLES A. CAMERON, C.B., M.D., F.R.C.P., D.P.H., Medical Officer of Health and Public Analyst, Dublin, etc.
"On analysis it proved to be composed of 9.5% moisture, and 90.5% of dry matter, including 1.37% of ash. It contained 61.1% of Albumin, nearly wholly made up of casein, but including a little albumin; together with 22% of phosphoric acid, a small portion of which existed in the albuminate, but by far the larger portion was in the form of sodium glycerophosphate."
"I have arrived at the conclusion that Sanatogen is a substance of the highest nutritive value, containing as it does a large amount, relatively speaking, of organic phosphorus—that is, phosphorus which it affords in the tissues in exactly the form in which it can be easily absorbed. It is an excellent food."

SIR GILBERT PARKER, M.P., the popular novelist:
"20, Carlton House Terrace, S.W." "I have used Sanatogen at intervals since last autumn with extraordinary benefit. It is to my mind a pure food tonic, feeding the nerves, increasing the energy, and giving fresh vigour to the overworked body and mind."
Miss ELLAINE TERRISS, the favourite comedienne:
"Hicks Theatre, London, W." "I have every reason to be grateful to Sanatogen, for it has completely restored and restored
me to perfect health."
